I love it. It feels right. Love the song choices. It's perfect for the game. Can't imagine a better soundtrack for this game. At first I tried to make sense of it, realized what it was and said "I'm sorry, it makes no sense at all." Then I listened to it again and said "yeah, but it's perfect." The way they used the actual track of the game played in the background, made me laugh. Maybe I'm a little goofy. That or I'm just not used to the game. I know that this is a short response, but I just can't be bothered with much else right now. But your game is absolutely fantastic and the music is even better. Reviewer Feedback: I think it's great. I love when the music pieces go from being silent to something that fits perfectly into the game's atmosphere. There's a lot of life to the tracks too. The music slowly gets more intense as the game progresses. Unlike most 'indie' games where the soundtrack is overly simplistic and boring, your soundtrack is great. It's very unique. You said it yourself, that your music choices aren't meant to make sense. I like that. Let's hope you and I can cooperate in future games. Keep up the great work! The soundtrack has been so inspiring to me (as a musician) for being uniquely chosen. I find it difficult to create music with any kind of theme or atmosphere and not be labelled a 'copy-cat' (also because I can tell when it happens). This is awesome game and the soundtrack is amazing! I love it and I can see the game having no game music because of it. Good job! Reviewer Feedback: I think it's great! You can tell that the soundtrack was deliberately made like that. It's good to be able to know what's happening in the game, and not just a sample of songs. You can tell in the game that something is going on, it's always only one song per area, and you feel it. It's a good thing that sometimes it doesn't follow the plot. If I had to rate the soundtrack, I would give it 9 out of 10. I guess it's good to have a soundtrack, but it's very disappointing that the game doesn't use any of its own music. The lack of music is very noticeable, like if there would be a silent movie. When you think about it, probably 90

What's new in Hover Junkers:

! The Unknown! The Invisible! My name is Bobby Pendleton and welcome to top-secret project, the mind-blowing, celluloid-wrapped rags-to-riches black-and-white wonder that you're holding in right now! Imagine that you're a guy with troubles. Not troubles with how to get a girlfriend, although that one's always a toughie, but things like being a man, having trouble finding a job, and generally just managing to stay sober and do the things in life that prevent one's personality from flipping all over the fence about to jump into a mud puddle and get cooked. Luckily for you, a recently invented secret science project has recently arrived in your town. A team of scientists with whom you worked on many brave and private adventures has brought this the most powerful and important lab in the world to your frontier town; this year's+ sign in the lobby of your local bowling alley is X-190. It's a neat place, located in a remodeled warehouse, and filled with many inner workings of the future, but it's pretty slow in-between the games. As a result of your "conscientious objector" status, they couldn't really use you, so you're surviving by refereeing and throwing routes like a seven time NFL champion. Most of these children come from your area, so they all know your name. You never see them on the field, but you've walked by the bubble they live in quite a bit. You know two or three of them have a lot of potential, and they seem like they have a bit of promise, but the majority of them are downright worthless. As you're throwing short routes one day you think to yourself, "I could sure use that kid." After a few moments of consideration, you have a brilliant idea: what if you... you know, cough adopted this kid? A guy like you, who has no quality of life, can't raise a kid, and has a history of becoming addicted to some goo known for its way-too-relaxing scent, isn't going to be able to properly mentor a boy or a girl, let alone pass a parenting test. Still, you have an idea: do you have to check this out in person? For a moment

The Sun is Dying is a new sci-fi themed action RPG with a rich story and setting. The core of The Sun is Dredge, a material blackhole. It is the result of a decommissioned star. The ability to warp through and exploit deep space allows exploration of strange new worlds. Discover and plunder the secrets of new territories and traverse deep space. Key features: An exotic sci-fi setting, with loads of wormhole and asteroid content Explore a huge procedurally generated universe where the world is your oyster A rogue-lite experience with the feeling of an MMO Story Driven Sandbox Combat Combat in The Sun has a strong emphasis on evasion and precise positioning. Enemy troops use their weapons to do as much damage as possible, while you use your armor to absorb as much damage as possible. Your current armor rating will be displayed at the top right of the screen. The combat takes place in a theater where you choose from a number of weapon/armorspecific skills to use against a wide array of different enemy troops. These skills usually have a cooldown time, meaning you have to use them quickly or risk being overwhelmed. Some of the skills can also perform more complex attacks. Combat has a strong emphasis on evasion and precise positioning. Each combat encounter has its own unique style. Each encounter has its own unique style. Expect to be triggered by events that make a tactical ambush or a carefully planned battle. Combat is exhilarating, with the potential to cause massive damage or completely cripple the enemy. Classes and Skills The three game classes (Soldier, Scout and Engineer) exist to fill the roles the game's skill trees present. Each class has its own attributes and strengths, which influence how the corresponding skill tree works. For example, the Engineer builds weapons and armor, while the Soldier is specialized in melee combat, and the Scout builds the most diverse set of skills. The game is highly customizable. The basic classes have hundreds of skills to choose from, and each skill has numerous variants that can be unlocked by progressing through the skill tree. There are choices for every type of job, from simple tanking to infiltrating and setting up traps. In the course of a single game, you have the chance to play as your favorite character. Unlock these alternate classes and see how they play, or even see how your favorite powers interact with each other. Extended Observ
