Applying binominal test for a combination of multiple outcomes I am conducting a binomial test where I have multiple outcomes and I am confused on how to apply this test to a combination of multiple outcomes. More specifically, I have a data set where I have 3 groups and there are different outcomes within each group. The outcome for the first group is based on a binomial test where I test between a binomial distribution and normal distribution. Then I am unsure how to go about applying this test to the remaining two groups in my data set. Thank you A: Suppose A_1, \dots, A_3 are independent outcomes of a binomial (n_1, p_1) random variable. Then $(A_1, \dots, A_3) \sim \text{multinomial}(\text{mult}\{1, p_1\}, \dots, \text{mult}\{1, p_3\}) \sim \text{multinomial}(\text{mult}(n_1, p_1^2, p_2, p_3))$. In the first line we have A_1, \dots, A_3 are conditionally independent given that $P(A_1, \dots, A_3) = p_1^2 p_2 p_3$. In the second line the binomial distribution is inflated by n

Vitamin D determinants were extracted from human serum with ethyl acetate under acidified condition, and the extracted sample was analyzed by two-dimensional electrospray ionization mass spectrometry. Each vitamin D3 and D2 has different molecular ion peaks when analyzed by two-dimensional electrospray ionization mass spectrometry. Each molecule of vitamin D3 or D2 is detected as the molecular ion peak in the negative ionization mode because both vitamin D3 and D2 have the same molecular weight. The molecular weight of vitamin D3 and D2 could be estimated by comparing the molecular ion peaks in the positive and negative ionization mode. The negative ionization mode of vitamin D3 or D2 provides the molecular weight of each molecule because the negative molecular ion is easily detectable and has the same molecular mass of the positive ion, while the positive ionization mode of vitamin D3 or D2 cannot detect the positive molecular ion of each vitamin.
