mouth-watering food experiences (and you have some time before your flight), there are several fine restaurants. As The Bangalore option I have had the opportunity to try out at least 4 different restaurants but I have chosen to give a broad brush review of the first and so, for that which is awesome and the. I started my food trip in Bangalore on a tour and sample of the food at some of the fine dine venues in Bangalore. I started off with a Bangalore days menu, it contains quite a The restaurant was quite swanky and we were seated immediately despite the lunch hour. The first thing that hits you is the decor, they have a very traditional air. As I stepped out of the hotel, people were starting to head in, from the looks of it the restaurant was already getting busy. The menu was short but I dutifully scanned it. I was there for lunch so I had a taste of all the starters from the thali at Rs 900. The items included Cola nuts, Ground Almonds, Cheese Paneer, Mixed vegetable, and a cabbage salad. The starters were quite a hit and were reasonably priced for what you get. The starters on the other hand, were quite filling and I had just enough to tide me over till my more interesting meal. The pick of the starters was the cheese paneer which was quite soft and had a great dipping sauce. The mixed vegetable had a great hint of asparagus. The cheese was a nice mix of vegetarian varieties, with cheddar and mozzarella. The cola nuts were a plain and simple cola nut, they were big and oily and tasted pretty much like the canned ones. The Almonds were crunchy and crisp and had a quite a little kick to them. The cabbage salad was a nice mix of flavours and the tinned tomatoes added a nice bit of acidity to the salad. Overall, the starter was an interesting and well varied mix, the starters were reasonably priced and a nice change of pace after the heavy starters. The excitement was in full swing and as the hordes of people waiting in line and the din of many conversations began. A man's voice darted into the chants of "Qui, Qui, Qui" ("Who, Who, Who") and a huge roar went up. The "fan panel", comprising several prominent and well-known Tamil celebrities, began
